

To The Cornell Community:

We are thrilled to have the opportunity to reintroduce ourselves to you. Cayuga's Watchers was founded in response to the tragic passing of George Desdunes, a classmate of our founders. Since our establishment in 2012, we have been steadfast in our commitment to fostering a safe and responsible party culture on campus. Our unique model was developed with the goal of providing assistance to campus organizations by offering, completely free of charge, the presence of trained "Watchers" at their parties. These dedicated individuals were specially equipped to identify and address potentially dangerous situations related to excessive drinking, sexual assault, property damage, and more. By blending in and keeping parties safe and enjoyable, Watchers played a vital role in creating a secure environment for everyone. We took pride in employing over 100 students at our peak, offering them valuable professional development opportunities alongside their commitment to ensuring the well-being of the campus community.

In our ongoing pursuit of greater impact and long-term sustainability, we have recently made a strategic decision to transition from a direct service model to a training-only approach. This shift allows us to broaden our reach and utilize our resources more efficiently. By focusing on training, we can empower a larger number of students like yourself with the knowledge and skills needed to intervene in potentially hazardous situations. This decision was carefully made to strengthen our financial stability and organizational longevity, ensuring that Cayuga's Watchers can continue making a significant and lasting positive change on campus. We are excited to embark on this new chapter and look forward to working together to create a culture of safety and responsibility at Cornell University.

We are thrilled to share with you the highlights of an exceptional year for Cayuga's Watchers. During the 2022-2023 academic year, we remained committed to our mission of training students to identify and intervene in dangerous situations involving alcohol. As the world emerged from the challenges of COVID-19, our organization was eager to reassert our presence on Cornell's campus and revive our mission to provide valuable training and resources, "for students, by students." We believe that our student-to-student training is the best bystander program available, and we are proud of the impact we have made in creating a responsible and safe party culture.

Expanding Our Reach:

To enhance our impact, we undertook several initiatives to refresh our model and re-engage students across campus.

We welcomed Amy Murro as our Graduate Advisor, whose leadership has proven instrumental in reigniting our presence on Cornell's campus. Amy collaborated with the Board of Directors to update and finalize an engaging bystander intervention training program, emphasizing a responsible drinking culture and party safety. Additionally, Amy spearheaded a recruitment and selection process, resulting in an exceptional new group of student trainers who are passionate about our mission. During the onboarding process, Amy worked with the students to hone their presentation skills and practiced addressing a variety of student questions.

Amy also launched an effective advertising campaign, utilizing channels such as emails, club fairs, posters, and flyers. This campaign successfully raised awareness about our training sessions, generating substantial student interest.

Cayuga's Watchers continued to foster a strong collaboration with Kara Miller McCarty, the Cornell Director of Sorority & Fraternity Life, along with her colleagues in OFSIL. Together, we ensured that Greek organizations were aware of Cayuga's Watchers and the free, research-backed bystander intervention education we offer.

These efforts resulted in over 30 successful Cayuga's Watchers presentations on campus, reaching more than 600 students, and 87% of the active member fraternities at Cornell. Amy's coordination with Greek organization leaders was essential in scheduling presentations that accommodated students' availability.

Training Engagement & Impact:

Our training, designed and facilitated by students, creates a safe environment for open discussion and learning. The genuine and relatable approach of our student trainers resonates with our audience.

We take pride in the positive feedback and outcomes resulting from our training sessions. Following each presentation, students were asked to complete a survey, and the results were outstanding. An overwhelming 98.9% of students stated they felt comfortable intervening individually, using the bystander intervention techniques taught in our training. Furthermore, 99.7% expressed confidence in intervening with the support of friends at a party. The survey also revealed that 82% of students rated the quality of Cayuga's Watchers training as 5 out of 5.

"The presentation was detailed and engaging, so I feel confident in my understanding of what to do."

"I have been prepared with excellent intervention methods suggested by Cayuga's Watchers."

"I felt I learned some great techniques that I can apply in a party situation."

Looking Ahead:

The success of this year motivates us to continue our efforts to create a culture of responsible drinking and widespread knowledge of bystander intervention skills among Cornell students. We invite you to become a trainer, attend one of our training sessions, or to simply tell others about our mission and help us grow.

If you are able, please consider supporting Cayuga's Watchers using our contribution form HERE. We are grateful for your continued support and commitment to creating a safe and responsible party culture at Cornell University.

Sincerely,

The Cayuga's Watchers Board of Directors
