

To Our Stakeholders:

We are thrilled to share with you the highlights of an exceptional year for Cayuga's Watchers. During the 2023-2024 academic year, we remained committed to our mission of training students to identify and intervene in dangerous situations involving alcohol. Our organization is eager to reassert our presence on Cornell's campus and revive our mission to provide valuable training and resources, "for students, by students." We believe that our student-to-student training is the best bystander intervention training program available, and we are proud of the impact we have made in creating a responsible and safe party culture.

We are proud to report we reached over 650 students through our unique bystander intervention training program this year. We've remained true to our foundational goals, focusing intently on Interfraternity Council chapters, whose chapters host the greatest proportion of high-risk events on and near campus. However, our vision has expanded this year to include a number of Panhellenic Council and Multicultural Greek & Fraternal Council chapters on campus. This strategic expansion underscores our dedication to inclusivity and broadens our impact across Cornell campus life.

Looking ahead, we are energized to continue this journey with the Cornell community. Together, we are not just fostering a safe party environment, but also nurturing a legacy of personal responsibility and care for our fellow Cornellians that will resonate for years to come at Cornell University.

Expanding Our Reach:

To enhance our impact, we undertook several initiatives to increase our engagement on campus including the continuation of our Graduate Advisor program and expanded marketing efforts.

By way of background, in 2022, we created a new Graduate Advisor role to lead the organization on a more permanent, sustainable basis. We were fortunate to bring on Amy Murro, a joint ILR/MBA student with superb leadership and management skills to help reestablish CW's presence on campus. In 2023, we welcomed Deen Whitaker as our new Graduate Advisor, as Amy Murro took on a new role within Cayuga's Watchers as a Program Director. Deen and Amy collaborated to keep our training materials up to date with the most current academic and practical knowledge. Additionally, Deen spearheaded a recruitment and selection process for new student trainers, resulting in an exceptional group of engaging presenters who convey their passion for our mission. During the onboarding process, Deen coached students to hone their presentation skills and prepared them to respond to a variety of student questions. Recruitment efforts have yielded our organization 8 highly qualified trainers for the year and 6 more trainers committed for next year.

Deen also launched an effective advertising campaign, utilizing channels such as emails, posters, and flyers. This campaign successfully raised awareness about Cayuga's Watchers' mission, resulting in over 20 successful Cayuga's Watchers presentations on campus. This represents a reach of more than 650 students, or, 70% of the active member fraternities at Cornell, 34% of the Panhellenic Council, and 18% of the Multicultural Greek Council.

Furthermore, Amy negotiated a discount for branded merchandise to be distributed during training sessions, with the goal of increasing awareness of Cayuga's Watchers and cuing participants to remember their training. We want students to be reminded to share and utilize the knowledge from the sessions throughout their time at Cornell. Amy also worked with Deen to further connect, develop relationships, and plan collaborative events between Cayuga's Watchers and campus offices including Sorority & Fraternity Life/Student & Campus Life and Cornell's Community Response team.

Training Engagement & Impact:

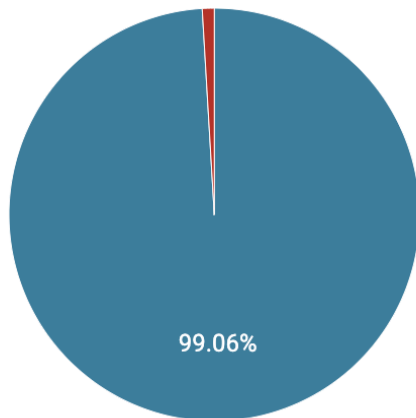

Our training, which is designed and facilitated by students, creates a safe environment for open discussion and learning. The authentic and relatable approach of our student trainers resonates with our audience.

We take pride in the positive feedback and outcomes resulting from our training sessions. Following each presentation, students were asked to complete a survey, and the results were outstanding. An overwhelming 99.06% of students stated they felt comfortable intervening individually by using the bystander intervention techniques taught in our training. Furthermore, 99.3% expressed confidence in intervening with the support of friends at a party. The survey also revealed that 84% of students rated the quality of Cayuga's Watchers training as 5 out of 5.

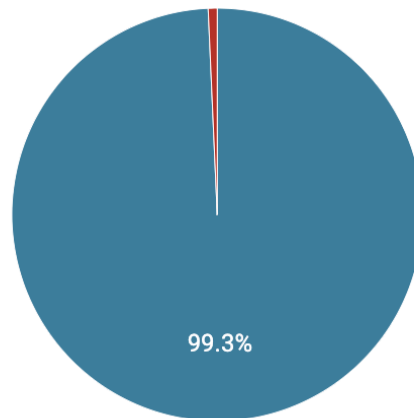

Data on Intervention Impact

This dataset reflects the feedback collected from 652 students who were surveyed following their training sessions on applying the information.

■ yes
■ no

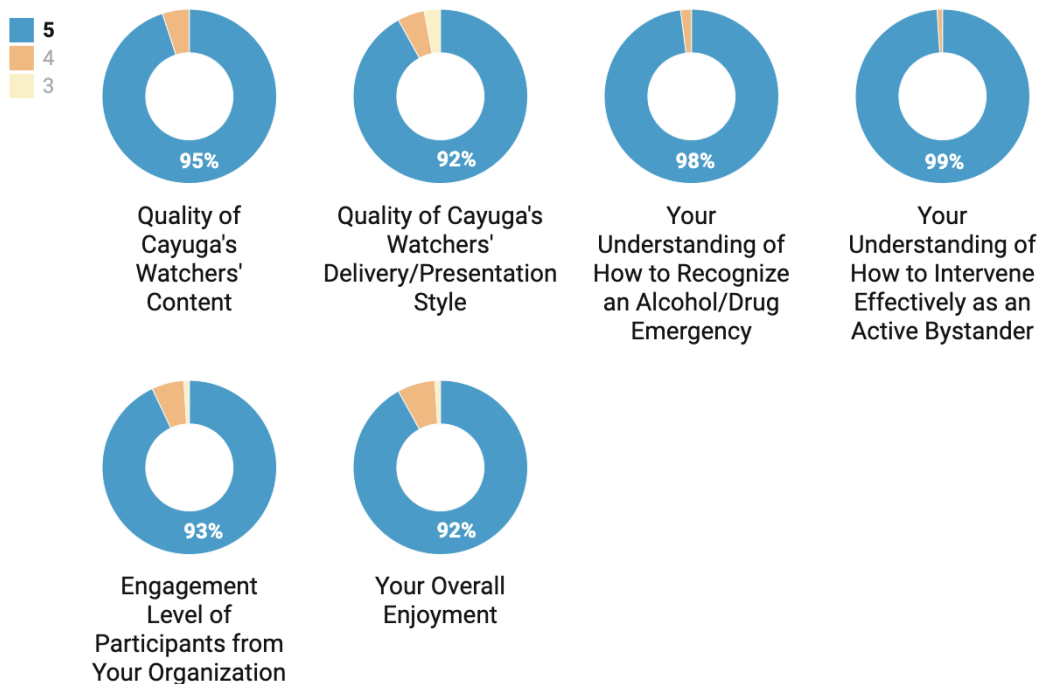

Do you feel comfortable intervening (with the support of friends) using bystander intervention techniques at a party after attending this training?

Do you feel comfortable intervening (as an individual) using bystander intervention techniques at a party after attending this training?

The following represents a consolidated summary of feedback gathered from our training sessions from Fall 2023 and Spring 2024. Participants responded to various questions at the conclusion of these sessions, rating their experiences on a scale from 1 to 5.

Selected feedback quotes:

"The use of real-life scenarios in the training helped me understand the complexity of these situations and prepared me to handle them better."

"I understand how to use distraction and other indirect methods as effective intervention strategies."

"I now understand the role of peer pressure in these situations and how to counteract it when intervening."

Looking Ahead:

The success of this year motivates us to double down on our efforts to create a culture of responsible partying and widespread knowledge of bystander intervention skills among Cornell students. We intend to expand our efforts on campus by serving even more organizations responsible for throwing parties and events. Additionally, we look to build upon our existing relationships with student organizations to establish 100% training completion across all Greek organizations at Cornell.

If you are able, please consider supporting Cayuga's Watchers using our contribution form HERE. We are grateful for your continued support and commitment to creating a safe and responsible party culture at Cornell University.

Sincerely,

The Cayuga's Watchers Board of Directors
